Andover High has arranged to send a delegation of twelve 11th/12th grade students to join teachers and students from the United States and other countries for a two-day Environmental Sustainability Leadership Conference on March 21-22 in San José, Costa Rica presented by EF Education. Participants will hear from world-renowned conservationist Dr. Jane Goodall, attend expert-led workshops, and have the chance to collaborate in small international teams to solve and then present solutions to environmental challenges. For five days prior to the summit, our group will travel in Costa Rica to learn how local conservationists are protecting endangered sea turtles on the tranquil beaches of Tortuguero and visit wildlife conservation areas near the Arenal volcano area. From zip-lining adventures to whitewater rafting, participants will experience the beauty and culture of Costa Rica while doing hands-on work to protect wildlife. More information about this program can be found at the trip website at <http://www.eftours.com/1632002HU>.
